Overview

Following the success of the co-organised conference series since 2017, the Shanghai Institute of International Finance Centre (SIIFC) at the Shanghai University of Finance and Economics and the University of Edinburgh Business School are organizing the JEEM-Edinburgh-Shanghai Climate and Development (Hybrid) Conference on 6 December 2020. The objective of this workshop is to present top quality theoretical and empirical academic research devoted to climate and environmental issues. The conference also includes a high-profile forum which brings together key policy makers, top professionals, media and academics. There is no registration fee for speakers. Presenters based in China may attend the conference in Shanghai and presenters subject to international travel restrictions may present online.

The committee welcomes studies that provide cutting-edge insights into current research work, Covid-19 pandemic and sustainable development in particular. Specific topics and research questions can include, but are not limited to, climate strategy and political economy, economic and social consequences of climate change, environmental behaviour and responses to regulations, environmental issues and development economy. The committee encourages interdisciplinary research that uses newly available datasets or research approaches such as machine learning to provide new insights.

Publication Opportunities

In consultation with the editors of the Journal of Environmental Economics and Management, the committee encourages conference papers to be submitted to the journal. Conference papers submitted to the Journal of Environmental Economics and Management will go through the regular reviewing process.
